

The comparison of the cleanliness grades shows that McDonald's has received more number of A grades compared to Wendy's. This is because McDonald's evidently has more number of stores and therefore more inspections. Therefore, we cannot come to a conclusion just by looking at this graph. So let us try to plot the grade distribution for each restaurant separately.

From this graph, we can see that McDonald's has recieved a lot of A grades, but at the same time, they have received a considerable number of C grades as well. Let us look at the grade distribution for Wendy's.

It is clear that even though Wendy's had less number of inspections, they were consistently scoring top grades (A or B), while McDonald's has been receiving poor grades as well.

Therefore, it can be concluded from the reported inspections that Wendy's is cleaner than McDonald's.
